

Home of Palos Couple Destroyed By Fire on Golden Wedding Day

By a cruel streak of fate, what was to have been a joyous Golden wedding celebration, was turned into a day of grief, when the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. McCauley at 131st and Wolf Road in Palos township was destroyed by fire Tuesday morning.

The household arose at an early hour to prepare for the proposed festivities of the day. A rousing fire was soon going strong in the kitchen stove in preparation for baking that was to be done. Soot in the chimney caught fire and some of the burning soot fell on the dry shingle roof and in just a few moments, the roof was on fire.

When the blaze was discovered, efforts were made to extinguish it but the fire had made rapid headway and was beyond control. To add to the seriousness of the situation, there was no telephone in the McCauley home and the nearest phone was a mile away. By the time this phone could be reached and a call placed for the Orland Park Fire Department, the home was doomed.

A good sized crowd gathered almost from nowhere in just a few minutes. All the furniture, clothing etc., were removed from the home before the burning roof fell in.

When the Orland Park fire department arrived on the scene, Fire Chief John Helenhouse, realizing the house was beyond saving, directed the efforts of his fire fighters in saving surrounding farm buildings.

The heat was so intense that the frozen ground surrounding the farm house thawed and soon the yard was a sea of mud.

The house destroyed was a nine-room building and was a real old land mark, being about 75 years old. The loss estimated at $4000 was partly covered by insurance in the Green Garden Fire Insurance Co.

Mokena Drug Store Installs Fountain

Keeping in step with better times and showing a spirit of progress, R. Hensel, Mokena druggist, is installing a new up-to-date soda fountain in his drug store this week and is having other remodeling work done in his store. Compliments Dick.

John Nordsell Files For Village Clerk

The village offices in Mokena have been going begging for want of candidates, but with the nearing of the filing deadline some activity has begun. The first candidate to file is John H. Nordsell, who has come out for the office of village clerk and has filed his petition for this office.

Will Hold Second Community Service

The second Sunday evening community service will be held in the New Lenox Methodist church this Sunday evening, March 14 at 8:15 o'clock.

The speaker will be the Rev. Mr. L. E. Coleman pastor of the Grace M. E. church of Joliet. He will speak on the subject, "Revenge of the Rejected." Special music will be furnished by the Joliet Conservatory of Music.

Votes Against Utility Tax Bill

Riding over party lines, the Illinois General Assembly passed a 3 per cent Sales Tax on public utility companies by a vote of 110 to 26 Tuesday. All of the proceeds from the tax will be used exclusively for relief purposes if the Bill is passed by the Senate with a similar two-thirds vote, which is expected.

Governor Henry Horner is certain to sign the Bill, inasmuch as it was introduced at his request and to take the place of a public utility tax declared unconstitutional by the Illinois Supreme Court.

Representatives Warren Wood of Joliet and Joseph Sam Perry of Glen Ellyn joined in supporting the measure, but their colleague, Lottie Holman O'Neill, voted against it.

Green Garden Collector Busy

C. A. Sangmeister, tax collector of Green Garden township, will be at the Frankfort State Bank every Saturday afternoon from now to June 1st to receive taxes.

Letters To The Editor

Dear Editor:
If the city fathers don't even move one little finger about the things that seem to be interested to the folks in Mokena, why should I or anyone else call a mass meeting. We would only be laughed at and some would say we have no right to do nothing like this but it is up to the town board. I think the board should call a mass meeting of all the people and talk this over. I'll come to a meeting and say my idea. So far not many people seem to be interested. Maybe a meeting would wake them up. That's a good idea Mr. Rinke you had about a meeting. I hope the board calls one. A CITIZEN.

FORMER BREMEN HIGHWAY COM. FINED $100

Irving Bettenhausen, former resident of Tinley Park and former highway commissioner of Bremen township, has had several tilts with the law since he invaded the Midlothian with a shady tavern. Last Tuesday afternoon he appeared before Judge Sandusky of the Cicero court, pled "guilty" it was reported to a charge of "keeping a disorderly house" and was fined $100 and costs.

Miss Snow, alleged housekeeper, of the establishment in question and four customers, were fined $5 each.

The trial followed a raid several weeks ago by police from the office of the State's attorney. Complaints in the Midlothian territory had been insistent and loud as to the alleged character of the "tavern" located at 147th and Central Park Ave. Bettenhausen had been "tipped off" to previous investigations, but evidently was not wholly prepared when the State's attorneys police dropped in at his place of business. Trial followed on Feb. 25th, with a continuance to March 4th, when the $100 fine was imposed.

United In Marriage By Mokena Pastor

On Saturday evening, March 6, at 5 o'clock, Kenneth Brown, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Brown and Edna Bettenshausen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Conrad Bettenhausen, of Tinley Park were united in marriage by Rev. Theo. F. Haelele, of St. John's Evangelical church of Mokena. Attendants were Virginia Mae Brown, sister of the groom and Milton Bettenhausen, brother of the bride. The double ring ceremony was used. The bride wore a blue silk crepe dress with accessories to match. She wore a shoulder corsage of red roses and white carnations. The bridesmaid wore an ensemble of gray crepe with a shoulder corsage of red roses and white carnations. After a charivari they left for Chicago where they have a furnished apartment and where both are employed.

Will Hold Bake Sale

The Ladies' Aid society of Frankfort Methodist church will hold a bakery sale at the O. B. Herschbach store this Saturday, beginning at 2 o'clock.

Pies, bread, cookies, cakes, cup cakes, doughnuts, and many more home baked delicacies will be on sale. A cordial invitation is extended to the public.

Green Garden Republicans Frame Township Ticket

At the Republican Caucus held by the voters of Green Garden at the town hall, February 28th, the following candidates were nominated:

Town Clerk, Walter Jacobs; assessor, Martin Harms; collector, Walter Bauer; justice of the peace, Harold Knickerehn, Wm. C. Lorenzen; constables, Mr. Schwieso and Will Albrich.

George Bobzin, present town clerk, will be a candidate for the same office on the Independent Ticket.

No Trace Found of Missing Man

No trace has been found of Chas. Flock who has been missing from his home in New Lenox for about two months. When he left home he had his automobile loaded with a stock of goods which he was selling for the L. B. Price Co., of Aurora. Representatives of this firm have called on Mrs. Flock saying they had not heard any thing from the missing man either. Whether he met with foul play or an accident, is a mystery.

No Services Sunday

No services will be held at the Frankfort M. E. church this Sunday Rev. C. F. Schellhase announces, however, that special Palm Sunday services will be held, March 21st.

MOKENA P. O. SAFE FOUND NEAR CHG. HTS.

The safe which was stolen from the Mokena postoffice early last Thursday morning, was found beside the old Monee road, four miles southwest of Chicago Heights, near Western Avenue, last Wednesday. Attorney Howard P. Roe, who lives in that vicinity, saw the safe Wednesday morning and reported to the Chicago Heights police and the postal authorities. The safe had been battered beyond repair and was reduced to a pile of junk.

A set of tools was found near the safe, evidently used to smash it open. All were standard railroad tools, a pick, two sledge hammers and a "fish-plate"—similar to tools with which the burglars smashed open a safe in the Philips Petroleum company's bulk station in Chicago Heights two weeks ago.

Abandoned with the safe and tools were most of the contents of the safe, consisting of various securities, papers and records.

The loot the thieves got away with consisted of $400 in stamps and $198 in cash money, according to Miss Margaret Maue, the Mokena postmistress. Miss Maue was notified by a postal inspector of the safe being found and got the securities and records back Friday.

Orland Officials Refuse To Run

Orland Park has a rather unique situation in the matter of securing candidates for village offices to be filled at the annual spring election next month.

Monday night of this week a delegation of Orland Park citizens appeared before the village board and tried to prevail upon the present incumbents to file their petitions for re-election.

Mayor Wm. Kollman signed a petition for re-election as also did Mrs. H. Adelle Cooper who is seeking re-election to the office of village clerk.

When the village trustees were approached to file their petitions, Harry Heiting and Herman Uthe signed up, but the other three members of the board, Thomas Wheeler, Edgar Cooper and Leonard Kay refused to run again. Following this refusal the other two trustees who signed their petitions also withdrew their petitions, thus leaving only one candidate in the field for village trustee—J. H. Schmadeke, who is to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Harold Kinney.

Mayor Kollman says that if no more candidates file for village trustees by March 16, the deadline for filing petitions, he will also withdraw his petition for mayor.

Inaugurate New Bus Service Between Tinley and Chicago

For sometime residents of Tinley Park section have been seeking improved transportation facilities between Tinley Park and points between Blue Island and Chicago. The newly organized Civic Club of Tinley Park tackled this major project as one of the first civic problems to receive attention and directly took the matter up with the Safeway Bus Co. of Harvey and the latter agreed to provide hour and a half service from early in the morning all day and evening thru to midnight. The new bus service was put into effective operation Saturday morning and has been quite well patronized. The busses are running on schedule time and the promoters of the bus service hope that the residents of the Tinley community will accord the bus line their patronage so this service will be able to continue the year around. Thus far the patrons who have used the bus line are well satisfied with the service rendered.

Second Fox Hunt Nets Only One Fox

The second fox hunt staged at Mokena last Sunday only netted 1 fox which was shot by two of the hunters, Glenn Palmer of Elwood, and Louie Lynch, 509 S. Center st., Joliet.

There were 175 men in the hunt which started at 12:30 from the Bruder farm westward into the Scheel and Harry Storm farms and then south and east along Lincoln Highway.

The fox which fell before the hunters was shot on the Owen farm and was given to the Elwood Chapter of the Will County Sportsmen's league.

The hunt was in charge of the following four captains: Herman Scheweiser Albert Cappel, Edward Maue and Paul Rinke, Jr. of Mokena. Mr. Hahn of the Conservation dept and Game Warden Upton of Plainfield and Gahagen of Joliet also witnessed the hunt. State game preserve land in this section was not entered, the hunt being confined to private lands.

Hunters from Plainfield, Elwood, Joliet, Tinley Park, Frankfort, New Lenox, Mokena and other nearby towns took part in the hunt.

This coming Sunday there will be two fox hunts, one at Peatone, the other at Elwood. Wolves are reported to have been seen in the Elwood territory.

Fox hunters have an invitation to go to either Elwood or Peotone, Sunday, for a fox hunt.

Frankfort Cemetery Board Meets Sat.

Pleasant Hill Cemetery association of Frankfort Station, Ill., will hold its annual meeting and election Saturday, March 13, at 2 o'clock in the village hall to elect four directors for a term of two years. Each lot owner is entitled to one vote and should be present.

"Yes, yes. So I understand. And I want to hear more about this affair." The tension in his voice was patent. "Floyd told me that Woode's death had all the appearance of suicide, but that you do not accept that conclusion. Would it be asking too much if I requested further details with regard to your attitude in this respect?"

"There can be no doubt, sir," Vance returned quietly, "that your nephew was murdered. There are too many indications that contradict the theory of suicide. But it would be inadvisable, as well as unnecessary, to go into details at the moment. Our investigation has just begun. By the by, doctor, may I ask what detained you this afternoon?—I gathered from your son that you usually return home long before this time on Saturdays."

"Of course, you may," the man replied with seeming frankness; but there was a startled look in his eyes as he gazed at Vance. "I had some obscure data to look up before I could continue with an experiment I'm making; and I thought today would be an excellent time to do it, since I close the laboratory and let my assistants go on Saturday afternoons."

"And where were you, doctor," Vance went on, "between the time you left the laboratory and the time of your arrival here?"

"To be quite specific," Professor Garden answered, "I left the university at about two and went to the public library where I remained until half an hour ago. Then I took a cab and came directly home."

"You went to the library alone?" asked Vance.

"Naturally I went alone," the professor answered tartly. "I don't take assistants with me when I have research work to do."

"My dear doctor!" said Vance placatingly. "A serious crime has been committed in your home, and it is essential that we know—as a matter of routine—the whereabouts of the various persons in any way connected with the unfortunate situation."

"I see what you mean." "I am glad you appreciate our difficulties," Vance said, "and I trust you will be equally considerate when I ask you just what was the relationship between you and your nephew?"

The man turned slowly and leaned against the broad sill.

"We were very close," he answered without hesitation or resentment. "Both my wife and I have regarded Woode almost as a son, since his parents died. He was not a strong person morally, and he needed both spiritual and material assistance. Perhaps because of this fundamental weakness in his nature, we have been more lenient with him than with our own son."

CHAPTER VII

Vance nodded with understanding. "That being the case, I presume that you and Mrs. Garden have provided for young Swift in your will."

"That is true," Professor Garden answered after a slight pause. "We have, as a matter of fact, made Woode and our son equal beneficiaries."

"Has your son," asked Vance, "any income of his own?"

"None whatever," the professor told him. "He has made a little money here and there, on various enterprises—largely connected with sports—but he is entirely dependent on the allowance my wife and I give him. It's a very liberal one—too liberal, perhaps, judged by conventional standards. But I see no reason not to indulge the boy. It isn't his fault that he hasn't the temperament for a professional career, and has no flair for business."

"A very liberal attitude, Doctor," Vance murmured, "especially for one who is himself so wholeheartedly devoted to the more serious things of life as you are. . . . But what of Swift? did he have an independent income?"

"His father," the professor explained, "left him a very comfortable amount; but I imagine he squandered it or gambled most of it away."

"There's one more question," Vance continued, "that I'd like to ask you in connection with your will and Mrs. Garden's: were your son and nephew aware of the disposition of the estate?"

"I couldn't say. It's quite possible they were. Neither Mrs. Garden nor I have regarded the subject as a secret. . . . But what, may I ask,"—Professor Garden gave Vance a puzzled look—"has this to do with the present terrible situation?"

"I'm sure I haven't the remotest idea," Vance admitted frankly. "I'm merely prober round in the dark, in the hope of finding some small ray of light."

Hennessey, the detective whom Heath had ordered to remain on guard below, came lumbering up the passageway to the study.

"There's a guy downstairs, Sergeant," he reported, "who says he's from the telephone company and has got to fix a bell or somethin'. He's fussed around downstairs and couldn't find anything wrong there."

Heath shrugged and looked inquiringly at Vance.

"It's quite all right, Hennessey," Vance told the detective. "Let him come up."

Hennessey saluted half-heartedly and went out.

"You know, Markham," Vance said, "I wish this infernal buzzer hadn't gone out of order at just this time. I abominate coincidences."

"Do you mean," Professor Garden interrupted, "that intercommunicating buzzer between here and the den downstairs? . . . It was working all right this morning—Sneed summoned me to breakfast with it as usual."

"Yes, yes," nodded Vance. "That's just it. It evidently ceased functioning after you had gone out. The nurse discovered it and reported it to Sneed who called up the telephone company."

"It's not of any importance," the professor returned with a lackadaisical gesture of his hand. "It's a convenience, however, and saves many trips up and down the stairs."

"We may as well let the man attend to it, since he's here. It won't disturb us," Vance stood up. "And I say, doctor, would you mind joining the others downstairs? We'll be down presently, too."

The professor inclined his head in silent acquiescence and, without a word, went from the room.

Presently a tall, pale, youthful man appeared at the door to the study. He carried a small black tool kit.

His Eyes Peering Cautiously Into the Garden.

"I was sent here to look over a buzzer," he announced with surly indifference. "I didn't find the trouble downstairs."

"Maybe the difficulty is at this end," suggested Vance. "There's the buzzer behind the desk."

The man went over to it, opened his case of tools and, taking out a flashlight and a small screw-driver, removed the outer shell of the box. Fingering the connecting wires for a moment, he looked up at Vance with an expression of contempt.

"You can't expect the buzzer to work when the wires ain't connected," he commented.

Vance became suddenly interested. Adjusting his monocle, he knelt down and looked at the box.

"They're both disconnected—eh, what?" he remarked.

"Sure they are," the man grumbled. "And it don't look to me like they worked themselves loose, either."

"You think they were deliberately disconnected?" asked Vance.

"Well, it looks that way." The man was busy reconnecting the wires. "Both screws are loose, and the wires aren't bent—they look like they been pulled out."

"That's most interestin'," Vance stood up, and returned the monocle to his pocket meditatively. "It might be, of course. But I can't see why anyone should have done it. . . . Sorry for your trouble."

"Oh, that's all in the day's work," the man muttered, readjusting the cover of the box. "I wish all my jobs were as easy as this one." After a few moments he stood up. "Let's see if the buzzer will work now. Any one downstairs who'll answer if I press this?"

"I'll take care of that," Heath interposed, and turned to Snitkin. "Hop down to the den, and if you hear the buzzer down there, ring back."

Snitkin hurried out, and a few moments later, when the button was pressed, there came two short answering signals.

"It's all right now," the repair man said, packing up his tools and going toward the door. "So long." And he disappeared down the passageway.

Vance smoked for a moment in silence, looking down at the floor.

"I don't know, Markham. It's dashed mystifyin'." But I have a notion that the same person who fired the shot we heard disconnected those wires. . . ."

Suddenly he stepped to one side behind the draperies and crouched down, his eyes peering out cautiously into the garden. He raised a warning hand to us to keep back out of sight.

"Deuced queer," he said tensely. "That gate in the far end of the fence is slowly opening. . . . Oh, my aunt!" And he swung swiftly into the passageway leading to the garden, beckoning to us to follow.

Vance ran past the covered body of Swift on the settee, and crossed to the garden gate. As he reached it he was confronted by the haughty and majestic figure of Madge Weatherby. Evidently her intention was to step into the garden, but she drew back abruptly when she saw us. Our presence, however, seemed neither to surprise nor to embarrass her.

"Charmin' of you to come up, Miss Weatherby," said Vance. "But I gave orders that everyone was to remain downstairs."

"I had a right to come here!" she returned, drawing herself up with almost regal dignity.

"Ah!" murmured Vance. "Yes, of course. It might be, don't y' know. But would you mind explainin'?"

"Not at all. I wished to ascertain if he could have done it."

"And who," asked Vance, "is this mysterious 'he'?"

"Who?" she repeated, throwing her head back sarcastically. "Why, Cecil Kroon!"

Vance's eyelids drooped, and he studied the woman narrowly for a brief moment. Then he said lightly: "Most interestin'. But let that wait a moment. How did you get up here?"

"That was very simple. I pretended to be faint and told your minion I was going into the butler's pantry to get a drink of water. I went out through the pantry door into the public hallway, came up the main stairs, and out on this terrace."

"But how did you know that you could reach the garden by this route?"

"I didn't know." She smiled enigmatically. "I was merely reconnoitering. I was anxious to prove to myself that Cecil Kroon could have shot poor Woody."

"And are you satisfied that he could have?" asked Vance quietly.

"Oh, yes," the woman replied with bitterness. "Beyond a doubt. I've known for a long time that Cecil would kill him sooner or later. And I was quite certain when you said that Woody had been murdered that Cecil had done it. But I did not understand how he could have gotten up here, after leaving us this afternoon. So I endeavored to find out."

"And why, may I ask," said Vance, "would Mr. Kroon desire to dispose of Swift?"

The woman clasped her hands theatrically against her breast. "Cecil was jealous—triflingly jealous. He's madly in love with me. He has tortured me with his attentions. . . . One of her hands went to her forehead in a gesture of desperation. "There has been nothing I could do. And when he learned that I cared for Woody, he became desperate. He threatened me."

Vance's keen regard showed neither the sympathy her pompous recital called for, nor the cynicism which I knew he felt.

"Sad—very sad," he mumbled.

Miss Weatherby jerked her head up and her eyes flashed.

"I came up here to see if it were possible that Cecil could have done this thing. I came up in the cause of justice!"

"Very accommodatin'," Vance's manner had suddenly changed. "We're most appreciative, and all that sort of thing. But I must insist, don't y' know, that you return downstairs and wait there with the others. And you will be so good as to come through the garden and go down the apartment stairs."

He was brutally matter-of-fact as he drew the gate shut and directed the woman to the passageway door. She hesitated a moment and then followed his indicating finger.

When we were back in the study Vance sank into a chair and yawned.

"My word!" he complained. "The case is difficult enough without these amateur theatricals."

Markham, I could see, had been both impressed and puzzled by the incident.

"Maybe it's not all dramatics," he suggested. "The woman made some very definite statements."

"Oh, yes. She would. She's the type," Vance took out his cigarette case. "Definite statements, yes. And misleadin'. Really, y'know, I don't for a moment believe she regards Kroon as the culprit."

"But she certainly has something on her mind," protested Markham (TO BE CONTINUED)

Sermons in Stone

In the Regional Museum in Aberdeen, Scotland, are many sermons exhibited in stone. These sermons are gathered from all over the British Isles, particularly Scotland, and represent both social and natural history, and are more impressive than textbooks. As an illustration, Carlyle's life is not only exhibited by his library of books, but from scenes associated with his life from his castle visits to his fishing haunts. Axe weapons, windmills and other paraphernalia of man's early history in Scotland are shown as processes of evolution. Geological specimens are shown amid flowers, fishes and birds and give a natural setting to the scene seldom witnessed in completion.

UNCOMMON AMERICANS

Pathfinder of the Seas

HE NEVER took part in a battle but his name deserves rank with those other American naval heroes—Jones, Decatur, Lawrence, Perry, Farragut and Dewey. His career was a perfect example of the saying that "peace hath its war." For Matthew Fontaine Maury was one of the greatest benefactors of all those who sailed the seas in his day and mariners still honor his name today.

Born in Virginia in 1806, Maury joined the navy as a midshipman at the age of nineteen. During his long voyages he became impressed with the scanty information that was available about prevailing winds and ocean currents. Strangely enough, an accident on land gave him his opportunity to do something about it. He was in a stagecoach smash-up in Ohio which made him a cripple for life.

As a result, he was placed in charge of the depot of charts and instruments in Washington out of which developed the hydrographic office and the naval observatory. Here he started collecting all available information on the meteorology of the ocean which he compiled from a great number of old log books of naval vessels. The result was his first Wind and Current Chart, issued in 1847.

About 5,000 of these charts were distributed to shipmasters, who found them amazingly useful, shortening voyages by days and weeks. "It was as if a friendly wizard in seven-league boots had suddenly risen out of the waves to lead merchant vessels by the shortest and quickest paths." So they were glad to heed Maury's request to send him the results of their observations of winds and weather and he began issuing more charts. Within a few years 200,000 copies of the charts were being used by mariners of all nations and it was estimated that the annual saving to the shipping of one nation alone was $10,000,000.

The outbreak of the War Between the States was a tragedy for Maury in more ways than one. Loyalty to his native state forced him to resign when Virginia seceded but, due mainly to the jealousy of a superior officer, his usefulness to the Confederacy was hampered and his career in its service was not a distinguished one. After living for a while in England, he returned to America and to a professorship at the Virginia Military Institute where he wrote a geography series which is still in use. He died in 1873, "full of years and honors" and one of the finest monuments in Richmond today perpetuates the fame of this "Pathfinder of the Seas."

"President for a Day"

A CITY in Kansas, a county in Missouri and part of the name of a great railway system bear his name, but David R. Atchison is best known in American history as the man who, it has often been asserted, was "President for a day." A native of Kentucky who emigrated to Missouri in 1830, Atchison was serving as a senator from that state in 1848 when Zachary Taylor was elected President to succeed James K. Polk.

On March 3, 1849, Vice President George M. Dallas, presiding officer of the senate, announced "the close of my official term being near at hand, I conform to an established and convenient practice by withdrawing from the deliberations of this body." On the motion of Senator Benton of Missouri, Senator Atchison was then appointed president pro tem of the senate for the remainder of that session of the national congress.

March 4, the traditional Inauguration day, fell on a Sunday and the President-elect not only had religious scruples about being inaugurated on the Sabbath but doubted the legality of such a proceeding. So the inauguration ceremonies were set for Monday, March 5.

Friends of Atchison claimed that, since President Polk's term ended on March 3 and Taylor's did not begin until March 5, there was an interim of one day in which the senate was the only continuing governing body. Since Atchison was president pro tem of the senate and thereby acting vice president (Dallas having resigned) he was also acting President between the administrations of Polk and Taylor, i. e. "President for a day."

Atchison himself never made any such claim and declared that the office of President was vacant from noon Saturday to noon Monday. Asked once how he enjoyed his short term in office he replied that he really did not know because he slept through most of it after an exhausting last day session of the senate. Constitutional authorities agree with Atchison in regard to the vacancy existing in the office of the President on March 4, 1849, but one edition of the biographical congressional directory credits Atchison with being "President for a day" and that legend still persists.

One gallon of coffee will serve 25 medium sized cups. The size that would accompany a dessert after a dinner.

When cream will not whip, add the white of one egg and thoroughly chill before whipping.

When blankets are to be washed for the first time they should be soaked over night in cold water and then rinsed. This is to remove the sulphur used in bleaching. After this they should be soiled until clear in a lukewarm lather made with boiled soap and water, and then rinsed well in clear water.

Don't treat your stockings carelessly. Put them on carefully, and be sure that feet and leg seams are straight. The slightest twist will alter the position of reinforced splicings, and wrinkles always run into holes.

Chocolate stains may be removed by washing in cold water or by soaking in boiling water to which borax or a little glycerin has been added.

To make lace look new, squeeze in hot, soapy water, then in cold water, and then in milk to stiffen it. Press on the wrong side with a fairly hot iron.

Rayons should be pressed with a warm, but not hot iron. A hot iron will melt some synthetic materials.

Dishes that have contained sugar or greasy articles should be soaked in hot water before washing.

Using Beef Fat—Pour off the fat from the pan in which the roast of beef has been cooked. Put it in a bowl and let cool until it starts to harden. Then beat well with a fork. Afterwards it may be used in place of lard.

Horseradish Sauce—This condiment gives the tang to hot roast beef. Mix together two tablespoonfuls of grated horseradish, one tablespoonful of brown sugar, a good pinch of salt, a teaspoonful of made mustard and two tablespoonfuls of vinegar. Lastly,

BRONC PEELER — Looks Like Foul Play

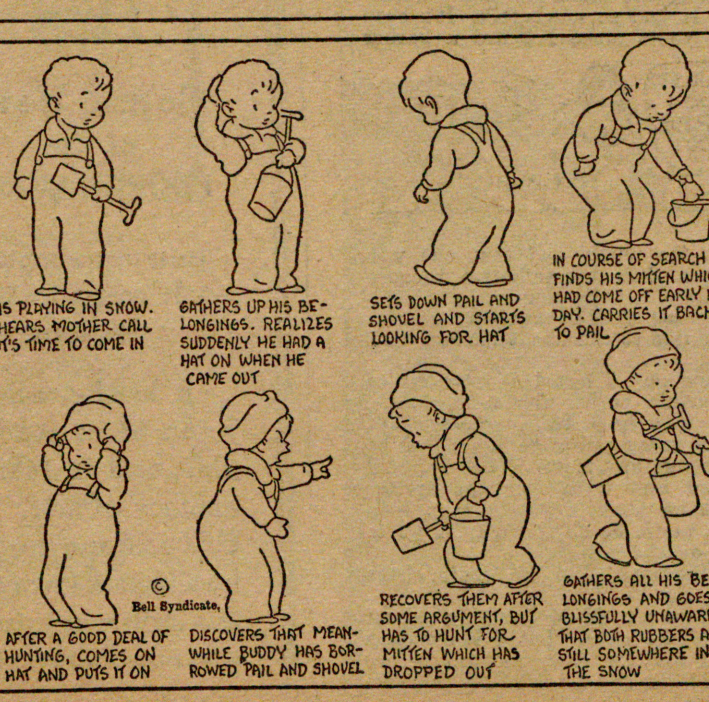

The Curse of Progress

A Fatherly Fear
"I'm afraid my boy Josh'll never make a farmer," said Mr. Corn-tossel.
"Why?"
"He's too refined. He wants to discourage an insect pest by stand-in' off an' callin' it Latin names, instead of bein' coarse an' uncompromisin' an' hittin' it with a hand-ful o' paris green."
Roughly Spoken
The woman motorist had given her evidence with an abundance of superficial detail.
"Now tell me," asked the magis-trate, "when you knocked down this man, what was his attitude, roughly speaking?"
"It was," answered the woman.
The Dog
"Why is it that you encourage all your clerks to get married?"
"Well," replied the knowing boss, "I find that married men are not in such an awful rush to get home early as single men."—Wall Street Journal.

Don't Sleep on Left Side, Crowds Heart

GAS PRESSURE MAY CAUSE DISCOMFORT. RIGHT SIDE BEST.
If you toss in bed and can't sleep on right side, try Adlerika. Just ONE dose relieves stomach GAS pressing on heart so you sleep soundly. Adlerika acts on BOTH upper and lower bowels and brings out foul matter you would never believe was in your system. This old matter may have poisoned you for months and caused GAS, sour stomach, headache or nervousness.
Dr. H. E. Shwab, New York, reports: "In addition to intestinal cleansing, Adlerika greatly reduces bacteria and colon bacilli." Mrs. Jas. Filler: "Gas on my stomach was so bad I could not eat or sleep. Even my heart seemed to hurt. The first dose of Adlerika brought me relief. Now I eat as I wish, sleep fine and never feel better."
Give your bowels a REAL cleansing with Adlerika and see how good you feel. Just ONE dose relieves GAS and constipation. At all Leading Druggists.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste
Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.
Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder may be burning, scanty or too frequent urination.
There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

George Hartman has been working all winter on a replica of the old Holland mill which used to stand north of Tinley Park and which was built over 60 years ago.
It was torn down quite a number of years ago. This old mill was used to grind feed, flour, etc. It was operated by a huge windmill.Mr. Hartman has reproduced the replica in minute detail. The great windmill's arms, railings etc., are all faithfully reproduced. Mr. Hartman has added a touch of modernism tho by the way of a miniature motor truck in place of the old time team and wagon. He is still engaged in putting the finishing touches on the replica, which stands about six feet in height.There are several photographs in existence in Tinley Park of the old mill which will be well remembered by the older residents of Tinley Park.Tinley Park is strictly enforcing the law against allowing unlicensed plumbers to work in the village. Police Chief C. A. Steinhagen has been given orders to arrest any outside plumber who attempts to do plumb-ing work in Tinley Park without a state license and also a village license. The penalty for doing plumb-ing work without a state's plumber's license is a fine of $25.Village politics are beginning to stir and from present indications, a quite warm election is anticipated.
Rumor has it, that F. A. Harper may be a candidate for mayor. When asked whether this rumor was correct, Mr. Harper said he had not tion that quite a number more of Legislative QuestionTrailer regulation is one of the most complicated and difficult questions that will come up for consideration by numerous state legislatures in the months immediately ahead, Joseph H. Braun, general counsel of the Chicago Motor Club, declared recently."Already several municipalities have taken action against the trailers and court fights have resulted," Mr. Braun said. "In some cases, the trailer wheels have been removed, and the traveling bungalow placed on brick or wood foundations which action, city officials claim, brings the trailer under the provisions of the building code."In Pontiac, Mich., a judge ruled that trailers must have at least four hundred feet of usable ground space and five hundred cubic feet space for each occupant."In Detroit, the Board of Health has ordered trailers to move off a Detroit parking lot on the ground that the trailers were unsanitary and unhealthful. An investigation has been ordered into possible fire hazards and other technical violations of the building code."The Town Council of Palm Beach, Fla., has decreed stringent restrictions against trailers and refused authority for establishment of a trailer camp. Parking of trailers on the highway is limited to one hour. A proposal was advanced in the city of Washington to prohibit trailers from parking except long enough to load and unload but this suggestion met with strenuous opposition."Other questions, such as taxation, schooling of children, and so on are among the knotty problems that have been created by the ever-growing and peripatetic trailer population."

THE SECRET OF SUCCESS
Text: Acts 1:6-8Illustration: A man had a gristmill fully equipped with modern appliances, expecting to use waterpower to grind his grain. The water was frozen, and the sky said unto him, "Without me ye can do nothing." He asked the sun for help.
The sun smiled and melted the ice and snow, which in turn ran over the wheel and gave power to grind the yellow grain.Apply the text: "Ye shall receive power," etc.4. Christ makes man a master every time, and in every place. (2 Cor. 2:14.)III. Infinite power is in Christ's name.1. The girl is greater than the dress she makes; the man is greater than the machine he constructs, and God is greater than the world he created. God's power is as great as His love—it is infinite, i. e., boundless, limitless, and eternal.2. His divine power HATH given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness. (2 Pet. 1:14.)Illustration: A long train stalled while climbing a steep mountain.
Another engine was attached, and yet there was not enough power.
Still another was employed, and the train pulled safely over the hill.Apply: The justified man has power —but not enough for every difficulty and occasion. Hence to the justified disciples Christ said: "Ye shall receive power (enough), after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you."Lastly: The Christian has power to rise, and Jude 24 declares he need not fall from grace.Church and

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Man" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, March 7.The Golden Text was, "Ye are my witnesses, saith the Lord, and my servant whom I have chosen" (Isaiah 43:10).Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "Thus saith the Lord, the Holy One of Israel, and his Maker, Ask me of things to come concerning my sons, and concerning the work of my hands command ye me. I have made the earth, and created man upon it:
I, even my hands, have stretched out the heavens, and all their host have I commanded. I have raised him up in righteousness, and I will direct all his ways" (Isaiah 45:11-13 to :).The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook,
"Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy:
"Man, made in His likeness, possesses and reflects God's dominion over all the earth. Man and woman as co-existent and eternal with God forever reflect, in glorified quality, the infinite Father-Mother God" (p.
516).

Special Tax Needed For Non- High School District

Much interest is being shown in the following circular letter which has been circulated in Will County asking that an additional tax be voted at the school election in April: Your Board of Education is embarrassed for the reason that our expenses are greater than our income. You are all familiar with the fact that all property in Will County, not situated in a school district maintaining a four-year high school, comprises our Non-High School District. The tax we levy is used to pay the tuition on all rural children, as well as to pay the total high school cost in villages and cities that supply less than a four-year course. The latter includes Mokena, Channahon, Elwood, Beecher, Crete, Manhattan and Monee.

Our present tax rate is $\frac{1}{2}$ of 1 per cent. Due to the decreased assessed valuation of our district, we cannot comply with the law as regards paying our honest debts. Our tuition bills this year are about \$130,000. The most we can possibly collect is \$100,000. In other words, we owe \$30,000. to our high schools that we cannot pay. Next year, our bills will be greater rather than less, because more rural children are taking advantage of high school privileges. This is a serious situation and the State Schol Law obligates your board members to submit to you the only lawful solution. Therefore, at our regular school election, the second Saturday of April, we will supply you with special ballots enabling you to vote FOR or AGAINST an increase in our tax rate from 1-2 of 1 per cent to not more than 3-4 of 1 per cent.

Of course, you know that, even with this slight increase, our tax rate in four-year high school districts. The four year high schools, Joliet, Lockport, Braidwood, Plainfield, Wilmington, Peotone, Chicago Heights and Aurora cannot indefinitely accept our eighth grade graduates unless we pay our bills.

We board members are serving you without pay. But we cannot serve your children unless you supply the funds that are absolutely necessary. Therefore, we recommend that you go to your spring school election, and vote FOR this slight increase. Place an "x" in the top square of the special ballot and guarantee your children the continuance of the high school privileges they are now enjoying. News From Springfield

By Bernice T. Van der Vries
Representative, General Assembly
7th Senatorial District.

Much credit should be given to the Speaker of the House, Representative Louie E. Lewis, for his efforts to speed up the work of the General Assembly by convening the sessions at exactly the time specified for the meeting. The House voted this week to start the weekly sessions on Monday night which means more opportunity for the passage of non-controversial bills.

The entire time of the House was taken up this week with the discussion of two measures, the Chicago Park Pegged Levy Bill and the Utility Tax Bill. Both had hearings before the House as a Committee of the Whole.

The discussion on the Park bill centered around the amount desired by the Park board and where cuts could be made in the budget. Mr. Robert Dunham, the president of the Chicago Park District never wavered in his claim that the only place in the budget where cuts could be made was in the services given to the people by the parks. The opposition as represented by the Civic Federation and Bureau of Efficiency and Economy argued that a general scaling of expenditures would reduce the amount needed by one million dollars. There was no final decision made as to the outcome of the measures.

The utility tax bill failed to receive the necessary 102 votes. The Republican party is divided in its stand on the bill and many are withholding their votes in an effort to force the administration to submit statements of the anticipated revenue needed to meet the expenses of the biennium.

Relief needs are mounting, old age pension costs are growing as more are admitted to the rolls and the schools are justly clamoring for more state aid. Added to this picture is the question of tax collections, tax penalties and tax delinquencies. A joint committee of members from both parties in the House is attempting to start in motion the drafting of bills having to do with the entire tax question so far as real and personal property taxes are concerned.

Many school boards in the district were represented at the Annual Meeting of the School Board Association held in Springfield this week. The plight of many schools in the state is almost unbelievable. The association vigorously demanded more financial support from the state. Many of the debated features in the State School Board bill introduced by Senator Stuttle are being ironed out and will be taken out of the bill by amendments.

Two bills were introduced this week by Representative Foster. House Bill 292 makes reinsuring insurance companies liable to persons entitled to recover damages for death or injury. House Bill 293 regulates the preparation and dispensing of food for consumption on the premises.

Rev. Paul T. Sanders, Director of the Community Center Foundation of Palos Park will serve as chaplain of the House the coming week.

Deliberation Versus "Rush and Jam"

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN
National Chairman
Sentinels of the Republic

Probably the most widespread criticism of Congress during the past few years has been based on the eagerness of its members to speed new and unfamiliar measures through the legislative mill.

"Rush and jam" has too frequently been the method—instead of careful study and consideration of all bills which influence the public welfare.

During recent weeks, however, Congress appears to have shown a different attitude. Measures affecting fundamental principles of our government are being subjected to scrutiny and study by various Senators and Representatives who have not hesitated to express either approval or disapproval—and the reasons therefor.

many have thus reassured their right to express their own opinions and the opinions of the men and women they represent, regardless of party affiliations.

To all citizens who regard members of both House and Senate as their representatives at Washington, this evidence of politically independent judgment is encouraging. To all Americans it means a stronger voice in government.

Rushing a measure through Congress gives the people little opportunity to understand its purport and effect, or to let their will be known.

Reasonable study and discussion, in contrast, clarifies the issues involved—not only to members of the Congress, but to the people as well.

After all, it is we, the people, for whom government is organized, and who are helped or injured by its actions. It is we, the people, who bear its burdens and pay its bills. It is to us that our elected officials must answer. And Congress should realize that it will rise in public esteem to the extent that it recognizes these facts and lets us know just what our government is planning to do.

NEW LENOX

By Dolores Walsh

In three basketball games played at the New Lenox Gymn last Tuesday night, the New Lenox Flashes girls, boys lights and heaves captured three very interesting games from the Mokena teams. The girls winning by a score of 8 to 3. The boys lights 27 to 25 while the heaves ended up with a score of 41 to 39. On next Tuesday night the girls and boys will play teams from Marseilles here on the home floor.

Mrs. Alvin Kohlhausen and infant son Donald Alvin returned home Sunday from Silver Cross hospital.

Miss Alyce Watkins, Miss Dolores Walsh, Harold Sayers and Leonard Anderson attended the Boat and Yacht Sports Show at the Navy Pier in Chicago Sunday.

A very large crowd attended the card and bunco party sponsored on Thursday (last) night by the St. Jude Men's and Ladies Club at the grade school auditorium. Club members wish to thank those who helped to make the party a success.

Mrs. Jack Minicus entertained Sunday at a birthday dinner in honor of Mr. Minicus at their home on Cedar Road. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Rolland Cagwin and children, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Reed and daughter Charlene Marie and Mr. and Mrs. John Cruise, Jr.

Miss Mildred Marshall entertained the Mari-debs club last night at the home of her sister, Mrs. Alfred Fox.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Johnson of Chicago were guests Sunday at the Peter Johnson and Alvin Kohlhausen homes.

Mr. and Mrs. John Cruise, Jr., entertained at a farewell party in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Reed on Saturday night. Mr. and Mrs. Reed and daughter Charlene are moving next week to Michigan where Mr. Reed has been transferred in his work. Games and dancing formed the evening's diversion after which refreshments were served. Those present were: the honored guests, Leona Reed, Raymond Cerven, Mrs. Jessie Walters, Maurice Fettes, Mr. and Mrs. Edward DeYoung and Mr. and Mrs. William Reagan, all of Chicago; Patsy Salada and Clarence Volker of Joliet; Mr. and Mrs. Rolland Cagwin, Vernon Hall, Adeline Reed, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Minicus, Lillian Carey and Mr. and Mrs. Cruise.

Mrs. William Wright and infant son have returned home from Silver Cross hospital.

Don't forget the dance this next Wednesday night March 17 at the Colonial Ballroom to be sponsored by the New Lenox Post V. F. W.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Fox and Mildred Marshall motored to Chicago Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Atkinson and family have moved to Joliet.

Around The Town

We hear that F. S. and L. T. have found a nice cozy parking spot down by the old swimming hole. They say you can't miss finding them there at 11 o'clock every night.

One of the Around the Town reporters must have been trailing E.

N. and Jr. F., cause he claims they are going strong.

What does R. K. find so interesting in New Lenox that he comes out here every night?

What's all this about D. W. going in a big way for street car conductors?

Hesty is beginning to want to play more and more pinochle. Course she's kind of fussy as to who she's called upon to play partner with in a five-handed game.

Why the rush Sunday night gramps? A new blonde on the string?

Peter musta got into a sham-battle with his gal-frien cause she wasn'tt around with him Sunday night.

Monday night dates seem to be quite the "GO" in New Lenox now.

Heard that L. R. and the boy friend R. C. were back in town on Saturday nite visiting and things look pretty serious now. Anyday!

Looks like D. P. holds her interesting eyes towards Mokena now. Nice going. What's his name, kid?

Contrasts
In Government

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN

National Chairman
Sentinels of the Republic

A famous historian has recently pointed out a series of striking contrasts between government by the many—as in America—and government by the few, or even by one—as in some nations of Europe.

Comparing the two, he shows that in nations where the people actually rule:

Wars are less frequent.

The standards of individual well-being and of living are higher.

Freedom of religion, of speech and of the press has been preserved.

Individual energy and progress are greater.

Science, art, literature and other high forms of human endeavor have made swifter strides.

Life, personal safety and general stability are more secure.

These contrasts he draws not from the dim past, but from the present, with the picture of what is actually happening on the broad front of world events clearly before him.

The picture is not only for the eyes of the historian. Constantly it flashes before all the American people in headlines, in news photographs, in reports from many authoritative sources.

It stands a constant refutation of those champions and admirers of the new dictatorships abroad, who would have the American people swap their power and independence for the desperate experiments now developing in Europe.

If the American people want to see what the Democracy established by our Constitution means, let them consider the progress in national development and individual well-being achieved by the United States during its century and a half of history.

If they want to understand what Dictatorship, or Communism, or other denials of government by the people can bring, let them look at the nations now suffering under such experiments abroad.

Chicago and It's Politician

The following by Westbrook Pegler appeared in the Peoria Journal Transcript and is being reprinted at the request of one of our readers:

Mr. Ed. Kelly, the mayor of Chicago at $14,000 a year, is away in Florida on another of his vacations but the city rocks along about as usual because the job is strictly political, and the boys do not steal any less when a Chicago mayor is home or when he is away.

It does not make any difference who is mayor or whether he is in his office in the city hall or scratching the sand off his belly in the shade of a striped umbrella or discussing affairs of state with some contractor or chain-store gambling house magnate under the grandstand in Miami. Things go along about the same in Chicago under one administration or another, Republican or Democratic.

The late Tony Cermak was off on a vacation when he got in the middle of Giuseppe Zangara, the demented Italian bricklayer, started shooting at Franklin D. Roosevelt. If Tony had been at his desk, putting in son hours for his salary, he might be alive today, but, on the other hand, he had spent a couple of months before that on a trip to Czechoslovakia on the city's time and nothing happened. So the fact that he was stalling on the job does not prove anything. It was just one of those things, as the boys say of anything that defies intelligent explanation.

They rarely get a good mayor in Chicago, but even if they had a L. Guardia who would work for his pay he could not stop the larceny, because the people are adjusted to it. They get barroom bums and churge going family men in the mayor office, but the spirit of the city remains always the same—accepting graft, corruption, and the fix as the normal thing.

They would be suspicious of an efficient, conscientious man with knowledge of administration and finance as well as politics.

The only thing that governs larceny in Chicago is the amount of money available for stealing or grafting. When time are bad, naturally the pickings are not so good, but rarely is there any restraint on account of an aroused state of the public mind, and there are mere brainstorms.

Occasionally some ambitious politician gets a few indictments and kicks up a row of righteousness to promote his own little career, but they never convict an important thief and things just go along from year to year and from generation to generation.

It is a marvel that Chicago stands up under the burden of this kind of government and its costs and losses. People in the income tax brackets reckon on having to pay the federal income tax on such income as they are unable to conceal from the collectors. But nobody in Chicago or Illinois at large, with the possible exception of some few nuts on the subject of civic duty, ever think to pay the personal property tax in full, and there is no state income tax.

Even if there were a state income tax it would only cause more corruption, because the habit of the community, the traditions and civic morality are such that people would naturally expect to go around and put in the fix with the ward captain, who would straighten things out for 25 per cent or something like that. The state would get only a small percentage of its due.

You might say that the state income tax burden would be able to draw on the federal returns for comparisons, but now you are talking about New York, not Chicago or Illinois. They are more docile in the east, though not necessarily more conscientious. Instead of an income tax which bears on the people who are really dirt-poor and hungry-poor the same as on the millionaire.

But the sales tax is not entirely collectible, and there you have larceny, too. They also have a personal property tax, but that is a joke, for it permits a man to make his own appraisal, and he is taxed on only 37 telephone book for a tax list, and per cent of that figure. They use the local assessor has just dropped 600,000 people from the roll on the ground that it would be too much bother and too great an expense to pursue the matter.

He is pretty close to the truth at that, but, nevertheless, there is the tax law, and here is the assessor saying to hell with it, and everybody consenting to that without the slightest thought of reforming the system.

Wherever you have gambling houses you must have graft and any city administration which protects them obviously must be crooked. But when the Chicago Daily News ran an expose of gambling doings under political protection the people clipped the stories so as to preserve the addresses, and you could not park within a block of them after that, so great was the rush of business.

This is the cockeyedest, the most abandoned, what-the-hell government of a major community in all the civilized world, but it has always been that way, and life goes on; and there you are. They must do it with mirrors.

Keep Eye on the Business

"A man is told to mind his own business," said Uncle Eben, "but he ought to be careful in pickin' out de kind o' business he's goin' to follow."

THE 60-horsepower Ford V-8 engine was first developed for Europe, where fuel costs are high. Two years' usage there proved its unusual economy.

When the "60" came to this country this year, the Ford Motor Company made no mileage claims—waited for facts, written on American roads by American drivers.

Now Ford "60" owners are reporting averages of 22 to 27 miles on a gallon of gasoline. That makes it the most economical Ford car ever built!

Best of all, the Ford "60" is just as big and roomy—just as handsome, sturdy and safe—as the famous 85-horsepower Ford V-8. And it sells at the lowest Ford price in years.

If you want a big car for a small budget—a car you can drive with pride and profit—see the thrifty "60" soon!

Nationally Known Fashion Authority

CONCERNING styles and fashions, women desire only that information which they know is authentic. They demand accurate reporting of the new clothing trends, with candid portrayals of the described garments through truthful illustrations. They seek the correct, the latest and finest—but never the bizarre, the extreme or sensational. They wish their fashion writer to speak of smartness and good taste, of what is practical for the average woman, and [a very important item] of garments and hats they can find in their own local stores and shops.

Small wonder, therefore, that women turn confidently to Cherie Nicholas, whose illustrated fashion articles appear regularly in this newspaper. Miss Nicholas tells what the nation's foremost designers and creators of fine styles decree shall be right for the weeks to come.

Flower Show To Be Held In Chicago May 8 to 16th

With leading associations in the building and allied industries co-operating and working for its success, the National House and Garden Exposition to be held at the Coliseum May 8 to 16 looms as an important contribution in the revival of residential construction and home modernization.

The Brick Manufacturers Association, Portland Cement Association, Central Division of the Architects Small House Service Bureau, National Air Heating and Air Conditioning Association, Metal Lath Association, Illinois Chapter of the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers, Oil Heat Committee, Burning Oil Distributors Association and the Garden Department of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs have endorsed the exhibition which will reveal the newest ideas in home building and equipment and will offer to the prospective home builder all the latest information concerning design, construction materials and financing a home. Landscaping and gardening will be stressed as important features in residential beautification.

The central feature of the show will be a home of modern Colonial design which will occupy 2,400 sq. feet with its seven rooms and attached garage all on one floor. Designed by White and Weber, Chicago architects, the house will embody all the novelties of proven practicability in residential construction and combining durability, economy of maintenance, fuel savings and safety against fire hazards. It will be fully insulated and will have one of the most modern and efficient combination heating and air-conditioning plants.

One of the departments of the show will be devoted to educational exhibits including interesting contrasts in the evolution of the kitchen the bathroom and the heating of the home, depicting the styles shown in actual use in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries compared with the modern equipment of today.

Another exhibit will be known as "tiny town" in which miniature models of homes submitted by participants in a house designing contest will be shown.

John A. Servas, veteran exposition builder, is manager of the show. Last year he staged home exhibitions in co-operation with the National Real Estate Board and the Federal Housing Administration in Chicago; Baltimore; Miami, Florida; Houston and Fort Worth, Texas. He planned and developed the Horticultural Exhibit at A Century of Progress and staged the first floor shows held at the Navy Pier and similar displays at the Chicago Stadium, the Hotel Sherman, and the Merchandise Mart.

Carl E. Heimbrodt, chairman of the show committee, is president of the Central Division of the Architects Small House Service Bureau, a member of the Architects Club of Chicago and the Illinois Society of Architects as well as the American Institute of Architects. He is consulting architect for the Electric Association.

"Home betterment will be the theme of the exposition," said Mr. Heimbrodt. "We are planning a show that will be of interest not only to home owners and prospective home builders but to all householders as well."

Headquarters for the show have been opened in the Builders' Building at 228 North La Salle Street.

PMA Sells $22,000,000 Worth Of Milk In Year

Over 22 million dollars worth of milk was marketed in 1936 by the 14,500 dairy farmer members of the Pure Milk Association, it was revealed Tuesday by John P. Case, president, in his annual report given before the 12th annual session held in the Auditorium Theater, Chicago.

Praise was accorded Pure Milk Association members for their co-operation in aiding Chicago to get a milk sanitation record of 97 per cent from the U. S. Public Health Service for 1937, as compared with a 59 per cent rating in 1935, which it is said now gives Chicago a milk supply "second to none."

The following information was released concerning the business done by the Association this past year:

1936 Business — Pure Milk Assn. Note: All figures quoted constitute a total of the business done in both Grade A and non-Grade A milk markets in 1936.

Total gross value of all milk sold in the Grade A and Non-Grade A milk markets combined $22,318,679.77.

Average gross price received on a 3.64 per cent butterfat test based for Grade A and Non-Grade A milk combined per hundred pounds (46.5 qts.) $1,955.

Average gross price received on a 3.5 per cent butterfat test basis for Grade A and Non-Grade A milk combined per hundred pounds (46.5 qts.) $1,899.

Average Association check-off for administration of The Pure Milk Association $.03 per cwt.

Average Association check-off for Market Adjustment Fund (which guarantees each Pure Milk Association member a market for his milk) $.044 per cwt.

Total average check-off $.074 per cwt.

Average net price received by members on a 3.5 butterfat test basis for Grade A and Non-Grade A milk combined per hundred pounds $1,825.

Average butterfat test of all milk produced by Association members in 1936, 3.64 per cent.

Average spread over condensary received by producers, Non-Grade A and Grade A combined, in 1936, $.337.

For the year 1936, the Pure Milk Association sold a total daily average of 3,119,590 pounds of milk (1,485,519 quarts). Of this amount 2,932,092 pounds were sold as base milk, and 187,498 pounds were sold as excess milk. Of the total average sales of deliveries of milk for the year 1936, 94 per cent was base, and 6 per cent was excess; as compared to the 82 per cent base and the 18 per cent excess milk sold in 1935.

Heavy Mortality of Children Until a few years ago, in British East Africa, the mortality of children under the age of one was reckoned at 80 per cent.

SALMON FRITTERS HAVE APPETITE APPEAL

DEEP-FAT frying is an excellent method of preparing foods so as to add variety to the daily round of meals. Here is a Lenten recipe—Salmon Fritters—that has real appetite appeal. Recipe: Beat 2 eggs and to them add ¼ cup milk, 2 tablespoons melted butter. Mix and sift together 1 cup flour, ¼ teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon baking powder and ¼ teaspoon paprika. Pour liquid ingredients slowly into the dry ingredients, mixing lightly with a fork. Then add 1 cup well drained, shredded salmon and 1 cup canned corn (drained). Drop by tablespoonful into hot deep fat (heated to 370°). Fry until golden brown. Besides being easy and quick, deep-fat frying is also an economical way of cooking. You can use the fat over and over again, straining it carefully after each using. And if stored in the safe, uniform cold of the modern air-conditioned ice refrigerator the fat will keep fresh and sweet indefinitely. And incidentally, these good-looking new ice refrigerators are so inexpensive that you can have one larger than you might otherwise buy, and so have plenty of space for everything without crowding.

BREVITIES

A competitor in twenty ABC tournaments, Theodore White, of Pekin dropped dead in his bowling establishment. White formerly lived in Kewanee.

Sit-down strikes were ended in two Joliet wallpaper plants when company officials agreed to institute closed shops, a forty-hour week and wage increases.

Mr. and Mrs. William Eaton celebrated their fifty-first wedding anniversary in Sidney. They have eight grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

A fall of coal killed Mike Cirar, fifty, Livingston miner, at the mine of the Mount Olive and Staunton Coal company. Cirar is survived by his widow and several children.

Rev. Dudley McNeil, pastor of St. Lawrence Episcopal church of Libertyville, announced that he will leave early in April to take up a pastorate in several Wyoming towns. He has been in Libertyville since 1933.

Arthur Gates, sixty-nine years old, died in Sycamore following a stroke. He had driven his car to the business district only a few minutes before. Mr. Gates formerly was an alderman and owner of a shoe business.

In a special election Mattoon voters rejected a proposal to issue $170,000 in bonds for the construction of a $309,000 sewage disposal plant. A PWA grant of $139,000 had been obtained, contingent upon the outcome of the special election.

Illinois farm women, meeting in Rockford with the annual Illinois Farmers Institute, voiced a plea for legislation to curb the "alarming increase" in sex crimes. Delegates also recommended legislation which will require a certificate of health for both parties before a marriage license may be issued in the state.

The Illinois Supreme court ruled that contractors do not have to pay the retail sales tax on services rendered in building construction. In a four to three opinion, the ruling was that contractors are required to pay the tax on materials transferred to owners of property in the construction of buildings.

G. M. Jensen of Antioch is the new president of the Illinois State Veterinary Medical association. Other officers elected are C. E. Dille, Cairo, vice-president; C. C. Hastings, Williamsville, re-elected secretary-treasurer, and Dr. C. L. Miller, Oak Park, named member of the executive board.

Herbert J. Vos, prominent Antioch business man and member of the village board, died of a heart attack. He was forty-five years old. Mr. Vos was president of the Antioch Lumber & Coal company and a trustee of St. Peter's Catholic church in Antioch, where he lived for 20 years.

The Progressive Miners of America scale convention at Gillespie went on record as demanding a six-hour day, thirty-hour week, a $1 increase in the daily wage rate and two weeks' vacation with pay. The demands were proposed for inclusion in the new contract between the miners and operators to take effect April 1.

The state health department classed the unbalanced diet along with alcohol as a highway menace. Lack of vitamin A in the diet causes "night blindness," the department reported in the current issue of the Illinois Health Messenger. "This lack of vision undoubtedly plays an important part in motor car accidents during twilight and darkness."

The numbers of all types of livestock except hogs on Illinois farms decreased during 1936. A. J. Surratt, statistician for the Illinois and federal departments of agriculture, said. In his annual inventory estimate report the statistician said that the Illinois hog population January 1 of this year was 4,053,000, an increase of 5 per cent over the same date a year ago.

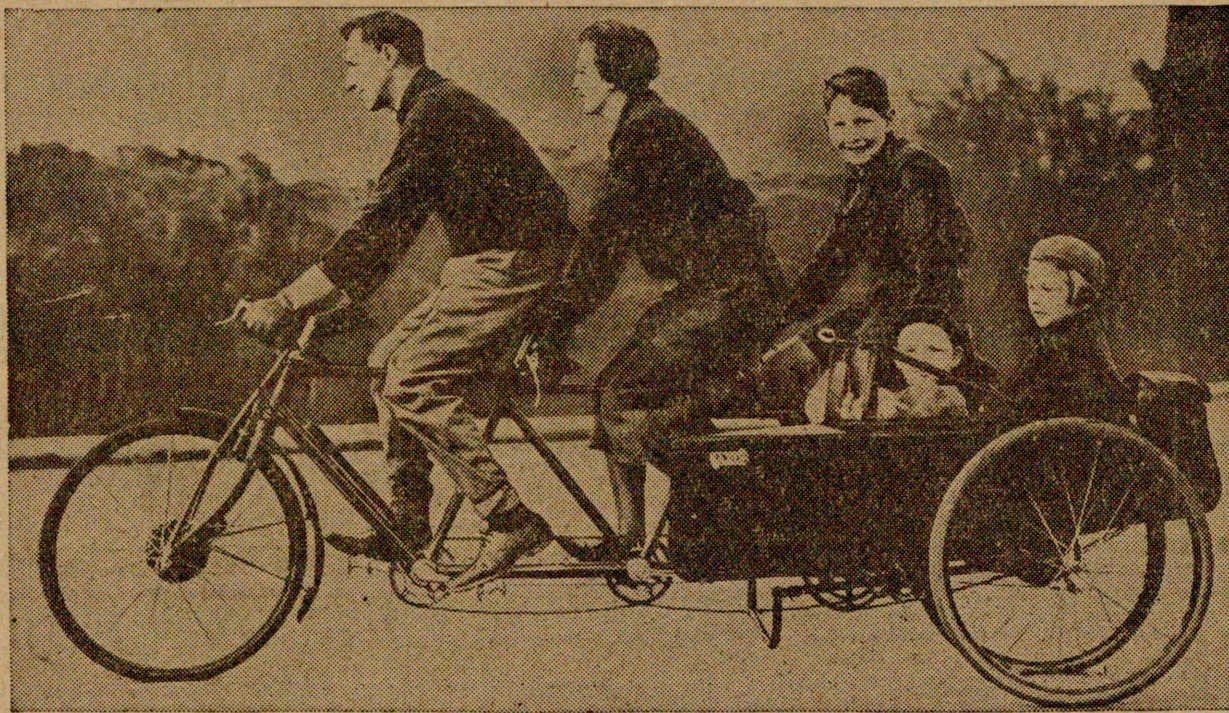

The Iroquois Illinois league, to which the state employees have been making monthly payments in proportion to the size of their pay checks for more than a year, is closing its books. F. Lynden Smith, chairman of the organization's board of directors, announced. Because all bills have been paid Governor Horner ordered the collections to stop, he explained.

Cakes and other food gifts to inmates of Illinois state prisons were barred by Joseph E. Ragen, superintendent of state prisons and warden of Joliet penitentiary. "Our prisoners are well fed and don't need to have food brought in from the outside," he explained. Warden Ragen added further that his edict was a safeguard against the smuggling of weapons and narcotics to prisoners. "Most of the visitors who bring food boxes look hungrier than the inmates," he observed.

Its ninetieth birthday was celebrated by Rockford college with charter day ceremonies that included an address by Donald Breed, editor of the Freeport Journal-Standard, on "The Newspaper and Public Opinion," and announcement of scholastic honor winners.

Albert E. Miller of Geneseo has taken out his twenty-second license on his 1916 touring car. Except for new spark plugs and tires, Miller said, nothing has been added to the six cylinder machine, which will start its twenty-second year of continuous service in May.

The Saunders Family Is a Pushing Bunch

If a bicycle built for two is considered unique in this day and age, just what would you say about this one built for five? It is the chariot of the family of Mr. and Mrs. S. Saunders of Norfleet, England. The bicycle proper is twelve feet long; motive power, three pairs of legs, owned by papa, mama and ten-year-old Victor. The sidecar is occupied by Patricia, six, and Michael, three. Cost of operation is about one shilling (25 cents) a week.

THE FARMER SEES A STRANGE SIGHT

THE farmer who had made friends with Billy Mink had watched Billy disappear through the hole beneath the shed of the farmhouse. He had chuckled as he saw the tip of Billy's tail disappear. You see, it was to get Billy over to the house that he had made friends with Billy.

You remember that for days the farmer had placed food for Billy close to the woodpile under which Billy was living. On this particular morning he had tied a big piece of fish to a string and then had dragged it from the place where he usually left Billy's meals over to the hole under the shed. There he had left the piece of fish. When Billy had come out from under the woodpile for his breakfast, there had been no breakfast there. But it hadn't taken him long to find the trail of that piece of fish where it had been dragged over the ground, and with his wonderful nose he had followed the trail straight over to the hole under the shed.

Now you know the farmer's house was overrun with rats, the rats Billy Mink had driven out of the barn. The farmer hoped that if he could get Billy over to the house he would follow those rats and drive them out just as he had driven them out of the barn. That is why the farmer chuckled when he saw Billy Mink disappear through that hole under the floor of the shed.

For a long time the farmer kept watch, but he was disappointed. Nothing happened. You see, Billy Mink, having eaten a hearty breakfast, had curled up for a nap under the floor of the shed. The farmer didn't know this, and so at last he concluded that somehow Billy Mink had slipped out unseen. "I did hope that little brown rascal would drive those rats out," muttered the farmer as he went about his work.

It was some time later in the day that the farmer went to the barn door and glanced over toward the house. Then it was that he saw a strange sight, a very strange sight, indeed. Out from that hole through which Billy Mink had entered came a crowd of rats. There were big rats, little rats and middle-sized rats. There were gray old grand-father rats, and sleek young rats. Never had the farmer seen so many rats at one time.

And it was plain to see that those rats were in a terrible fright. They were squeaking and squealing with fear, and every one of them was running as fast as he could. They scattered in all directions. Some made for the big barn, some made for the woodpile, some made for the henhouse, and others started off straight toward the next farm, in spite of the snow on the ground. The farmer shouted aloud for joy. He knew that there wouldn't be one rat left in that house by the time Billy Mink came out.

First Aid to the Ailing House

—By— Roger B. Whitman

EXPOSED WOOD PORCHES

A PART of a house that sooner or later is almost certain to give trouble is an open wood porch. As porches are usually built, even the best of floor paint will not last for more than a year or two, and wood steps and their supports are likely to rot where they rest on the earth. Water soaking into cracks between floor boards and under the edges of a porch also leads to rotting.

In building a new porch or in making repairs, this damage can be largely offset through the use of proper materials and methods. Some kinds of wood are much more resistant to rotting than others. Two of these rot-resistant woods are redwood and cypress. One or the other should be used for the steps and other parts that are in contact with the earth. Heavy painting with creosote will protect any kind of wood from rotting.

All of the wood used in building an open porch should be "back-painted"; that is, all parts, backs and edges, should be given a coat of paint as a protection against moisture. Any kind of good paint can be used; aluminum paint is excellent, and so is white lead thinned with linseed oil to the consistency of thick paint.

In laying the floor, which is usually made of tongue-and-groove strips, the strips should be driven tightly together. As the joints are filled with paint, they will be closely bound, and cracks between boards are not likely to develop. Built in this way, floor paint will last for several seasons instead of but one or two. The failure of paint on the floor of an open porch is due to the soaking of water into cracks between boards. The wood absorbs the moisture, which on dry and hot days is drawn out through the top surface of the boards. It is this that loosens floor paint. With the joints closed with paint, and the board prevented from shrinking, this effect cannot take place.

The bottoms of porch columns should be so finished that water cannot collect under them. They can be bedded in white lead, and further protected by strips of quarter-round or other molding, also laid in white lead.

The joints between the ends of porch railings and the columns or other parts that support them should be treated in the same way. Very commonly these joints open, and there will be rotting as water soaks in. Should these open joints appear, they should be packed with white lead, calking compound, or something similar. With such precautions, repairs to a porch can be averted almost indefinitely.

HOW HE HELPED

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

HIS father bought a sugar bush Back in the days when land was cheap. Of course, 'twas wrong of him to push Himself above his neighbors, keep An eye upon a rainy day, And worst of all to put away A little for his youngster, too, When times get bad, as times will do.

And yet he did, and then he died And left the maples to his son, And past the place I often ride. (It's out on Rural Number One.) That sugar bush his father bought Turned out about the way he thought, Has been enough, with what he had To keep the youngster of that dad.

I realize it's wrong to save, The newer name for thrift is greed, And that old farmer in his grave Should be condemned, condemned indeed. And yet I rather hesitate To do it—I have thought of late That when that sugar bush was grown He saved for others than his own.

Upon the poor-list you will find No mention of that son of his, Though other farmers feel the grind Of taxes for some man who is. He saved a little for his son, But he was not the only one, He served his neighborhood the best By loading no one on the rest.

THE LANGUAGE OF YOUR HAND

By Leicester K. Davis
© Public Ledger, Inc.

THE fingers, like the thumb, hold many a startling revelation of the inner self. These become clear as the printed pages of a book to those who learn to read them right. Each finger has its own significance which must be studied as a separate element, much as you have determined the indications given by the thumb.

What the Fingers Signify.

Finger analysis begins with the phases of personality represented by each, as shown by the accompanying illustration.

The general rules governing analysis of the thumb apply. When analyzing a finger, have thoroughly fixed in mind the qualities of temperament it stands for. Next determine its type from form and length and flexibility. Examine the contour of the finger as a whole, noting whether it is of square or tapered type, whether smooth or irregular, whether bony or well fleshed. And particularly note the length in relation to the lengths of the other fingers, as well as the relative lengths of the finger and that of the palm upon which it is set.

Memorize the meaning of each finger: The first, or index, finger represents power, purpose, progress. The second, the quality and kind of thought. The third, brilliancy and fame. The fourth, the psychic and idealistic qualities of the mind.

NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D. C.

Washington.—Many times in these columns, I have called attention to the confusion that has come to be so much a part of the federal government's general administration. I have talked about the bluster and the ballyhoo and the cross purposes at which so many pieces of the New Deal program have operated, and another outstanding example of this condition now appears.

More Confusion

Two governmental agencies, one a strictly New Deal agency, the other with a beginning in the Hoover administration, find themselves working directly in opposition to each other—and in the end taxpayers will pay.

It is not the fault of the Home Owners Loan corporation that it finds itself in a position where it is going to be landlord to something like 160,000 pieces of real estate—largely homes.

When the government went into the business of loaning money on private residence it had experience upon which to base its program. Many years ago the farm loan system was organized with none too happy results. In the late days of the Hoover administration, however, three or four politicians were able to drive through the legislation creating a system of government loans on residences as distinguished from farms.

I predicted in these columns some three years ago that the government, through the HOLC, was going to be the proud possessor of a lot of real estate. My statements at that time were based upon what I had seen happen in the case of the loans on farms. The article brought me direct criticism from two or three places in the government—but at this time I can report that the HOLC, before another year passes, will own something like 160,000 homes.

It is always difficult for a mortgage or bank institution, privately owned, to dispose of property which it has been forced to repossess through default of the borrowers. It is much more difficult for the federal government to dispose of that type of property, try as it may to get rid of the parcels.

So, we find one governmental agency serving as a landlord on a wholesale scale and with signs portending moves by politicians that will in the end cost the taxpayers hundreds of millions of dollars. These politicians are proposing legislation in congress to cut the interest rate on the loans now in default and other loans as well; the principal of the loans on the defaulted mortgages and they are seeking means by which those in default may have unlimited time in which to make the payments in a way that, superficially at least, makes the proposals appear actually as an outright gift to those who have bought homes under the government loan plan.

There is no way to tell now what will happen to these various proposals. Undoubtedly, most of them will fall by the wayside and receive no consideration in congress. Yet, on the basis of observation of many such movements, it does not seem far wrong to guess that the politicians in congress will accomplish something in the way of reduction of these debts where the defaulters bring pressure to bear on the home town political machines.

Now, concerning the other governmental agency involved in the game of cross purposes that I mentioned.

Cross Purposes

I refer to the federal housing administration. Like the Home Owners Loan corporation, it is not the fault of the housing administration that it finds itself in a tough spot. It is commanded by the President and by congress to proceed with a gigantic housing program, to loan money on new homes wherever it can persuade contractors to build and individuals to buy. It is to be remembered also that loans on these properties are guaranteed—the legislation calls them insured loans—and that makes the federal housing administration liable in case the new home buyers fail to meet their commitments.

The housing administration announced its program to encourage wholesale home building throughout the nation only recently and it was by coincidence, I am sure, that the housing program was announced almost simultaneously with the determination by the HOLC to start foreclosure proceedings in order to maintain its own solvency.

Thus, to bring the picture to a focus, we find one governmental agency that has loaned hundreds of millions of dollars on residences being forced to foreclose in order to protect the money it has spent, at least in part, and a second governmental agency entering the field simultaneously with a gigantic program in which more hundreds of millions will be expended and more people encouraged to place themselves in debt.

I cannot criticize the housing administration policy any more than I can criticize the program of the HOLC. The point is that there is simply no co-ordination in government policies as they concern these two agencies, and consequently, one group is building new homes and another is taking over old homes for which the buyers have been unable to pay. In my humble opinion, it does not make good sense.

I have heard considerable talk among influential New Dealers to the effect that new homes will sell more easily than the old ones and therefore the housing administration plans are held to be justified. Yet, it does seem to be a perfectly natural and logical thing that new homes become old homes as time elapses and there are many who believe that the government, because it has guaranteed the loans on new homes, will have to take over a large percentage of them as well. That is, it will have to take over at least a normal percentage because whether the loans are made by private financing companies or by the government, a considerable number of buyers are unable to fulfill their obligations. It is not always the fault of the buyers. Sickness, loss of jobs or a thousand and one other circumstances may develop that prevents the buyer of a home from carrying through his cherished dream of own the roof over his head. It is the way of life that a certain percentage will, and of necessity must, fall by the way-side.

I never have been able to agree that the federal government has any business in the field of financing homes or extending credit to individuals.

I have always criticized the Hoover administration for creating the Reconstruction Finance corporation and the Roosevelt administration for expanding its operations. The principle is wrong because it uses money either borrowed by the government or paid into the Treasury by the taxpayers to finance, to build up, personal funds of individuals or corporations.

It seems quite clear to me that the HOLC, following the experiences of the farm loan system, justifies the conclusion that the federal government cannot successfully engage in that field. In the first instance, I think it is bad business for government to go beyond the protection of life, liberty and property, with all the implications carried in those three words as a governmental policy. Further, and with much more emphasis, I am sure that any time government engages in that field it opens the way for politicians to be tempted, to be forced, to do things in a legislative way that cannot be justified as economically sound.

Earlier in this article, I suggested the difficulty always surrounding the sale of property that has been taken back from the original purchasers. Officials of private mortgage companies and other financial institutions have grown many a gray hair in their efforts to recover money loaned in cases where the borrowers have met with unfortunate circumstances. The government, finding itself in the position of the private lender insofar as repossession of property is concerned, has about one-half the chance of liquidation that the private lender would have. And beyond that, there is too much chance for favoritism, scheming and even crookedness when the government attempts to do a job like the HOLC now is facing. I say that regardless of the honest purpose that I know characterizes the present HOLC management.

It may not have occurred to some but the fact that the federal government through the HOLC will own all of these houses which had to be taken back, means that the federal government becomes a taxpayer in every city, county and state where it owns these homes. At the rate things are going and assuming that the ratio of delinquencies and defaults continue as they do for private lending agencies, another four years will see the HOLC in possession of a minimum of 250,000 parcels of real estate. Of course, I imagine, the local tax collectors will be glad to see the federal government taking over the property because they will then collect their taxes. But where does that money come from? Sooner or later, directly or indirectly, it comes from the taxpayers of the nation. It is not a pleasant outlook.

And who knows but what there may be more decisions like that of the Florida judge who refused to grant the foreclosure plea of the HOLC attorneys on a twelve hundred dollar mortgage on the home of a carpenter.

Lesson for March 14

JESUS PRAYING FOR HIS DISCIPLES

LESSON TEXT — John 16:5-7; 17:14-26.
GOLDEN TEXT — That they may be one, even as we are one. John 17:22.

PRIMARY TOPIC — When Jesus Prayed for His Friends.

JUNIOR TOPIC — Did Jesus Pray for Me?

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC — Jesus Praying for Us.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC — Unity with God and One Another.

The assurance that someone is praying for us is an anchor in a time of storm. Many a man or woman has been on the point of giving up in despair, of yielding to temptation, and has been carried through to victory by the intercession of a godly mother or father. Just to know that someone prays for us is to find strength for the knees that have weakened and for the heart that has all but failed.

Infinitely more precious is the truth of our lesson, that the Lord Jesus himself prayed for each one of his followers. John 17:20 makes clear that while he prayed for those who were with him at the time, he also included in his petition all who since that day have come to believe on him because of their testimony.

Before entering upon his inexpressibly precious and beautiful prayer, the Lord gave to his followers a promise which was of vital importance.

I. A Promise (16:5-7).

Persecution is coming, and Jesus will not be with them to meet the trying hour. He is about to enter upon that final scene in his earthly life, which will bring it to its end in "a place called the place of a skull."

How then can he say to them that it is expedient for them that he go away? Because he will send the Comforter, the Holy Spirit. Students of the Scriptures recognize in the Holy Trinity an inscrutable mystery, but receive the teaching of the Bible concerning the ministries of the three persons in the one Godhead with glad and thankful hearts. It is a subject which cannot be entered into here, but which richly rewards careful study. Suffice it to say that while the Holy Spirit has always been active in the earth, he did enter upon a ministry of a special nature when Jesus had gone to be with the Father.

The essence of the work of the Holy Spirit is to glorify Christ (16:14), and in so doing he convicts the unbeliever of sin and guides the believer into all truth. The mark of a Spirit-filled Christian is that he permits the Spirit to glorify Christ in him and in his service for God.

II. A Prayer (17:14-26).

When one enters the sacred precincts of John 17 he feels that he has come into the holy of holies, and that he would not only lose the shoes from his feet, but also stand silent in worship and in praise. He prayed for me—for me!

Each student of this lesson will wish to enter fully upon the meaning of these words as he re-reads them, in the illumination of the Holy Spirit. May I suggest three things which Jesus sought for His children?

1. Consecration (vv. 14-16). No one is Christ's child without regeneration, but, sad to say, there are many children in his blessed household who are not obedient, not spiritually well and strong. They are in the world, they must be here, but alas too many of them want to be as much like the world as possible. He prayed that we might be kept from evil, separate from the world, kept by God even in a world that hates him and his truth.

2. Sanctification (vv. 17-21). This means to be set apart and cleansed for God's service. How is it accomplished? Through the truth. His Word is the instrument of sanctification. Little wonder that there is so little holiness of living when the Word has so little opportunity to touch and cleanse the life.

This separated life brings God's people into that unity of love—all in Christ, and he in the Father—all bound up in that "one great bundle of love."

3. Glorification (vv. 22-26). When Jesus came into the world in the flesh he voluntarily laid aside the glory which was his, and which still is his, and which he prays that we may behold. "But we all, with open face beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image" (II Cor. 3:18). Thus in beholding his glory we also may enter into his likeness.

City Versus Country

It cannot escape even a casual observer that the Bible begins with a scene in the garden to end in a city: one may be "nearer God's heart in a garden than anywhere else on earth"—but certainly "the dwelling-place of God is with men."

Accidents Happen

"WHO is she?"
"Huh? Oh—Myrtle Foster. Nice girl."

"I'll say she is. I don't think I met her."

"No? I'll introduce you. Come here alone, too."

Phil Roberts found himself staring, but it was so good to stare at her that he didn't stop. She sat across the table half-hidden by the big flower center-piece, and through it her hazel eyes gleamed like jewels. She was all chestnut and mellow wine colors in that dress and with that hair. . . . He managed to look away, but only to peer carefully out of the corners of his eyes up and down the long table. Everybody was busy. He sighed happily and gave himself up to long, continued staring. What skin! What a forehead! What eyes! What eyes! She was looking right at him.

He sought an introduction in a hurry.

"Al's parties are always elaborate but sometimes a little dull. I thought it would be duller than ever for me because I had to come alone—but it's not any more."

She looked pleased and, while she didn't say it, she was thinking the same thing. She had been watching him as he talked. She liked his even teeth and his broad mouth with the quirk in the corners. His hair was almost the color of hers, with a clean shine in it. And such a pleasant manner—

"Oh-ho," said someone behind her, "we'll have to put a stop to this."

They looked away from each other for the first time to find everyone looking at them and Al holding a watch. "Ten minutes in one corner is long enough for people who have just been introduced. Come on—circulate!"

He couldn't say more than a few words to her until the party broke up. As he held her coat. "It's over much too soon."

She nodded.

"But you'll let me take you home, won't you? My car's right outside."

"So is mine. I guess I'll have to go home with myself. Tonight, anyway," she added, and his heart jumped at the way she said it.

"But maybe it won't start," she continued. "Better wait till I see. I had a little accident on the way here."

"Too bad. Much broken?"

"She's been stuttering ever since." Her face clouded. "An absolute nitwit in a big coupe dashed ahead of the light. You know how icy the streets are today. Well, my brakes held, but the wheels didn't. I spooled his right running board and he mashed my lights and punctured my radiator. I was sorry at first, but he was so nasty—talked about woman drivers and said I should have my eyes looked after—that I told him I was sorry I hadn't put on full speed and knocked the stuffing out of him. Well! You should have seen how angry he got! Went off in a cloud of snow and left me sitting and freezing in my roadster waiting for someone to come along and help me straighten my fender so that I could steer. It was too dark for us to see each other. Whoever he is, I hope his radiator freezes tonight."

Roberts felt a cold chill come over him. He drew himself up. "The light, my dear madam, was green on my side for a full ten seconds before I entered the intersection."

Myrtle looked at him, startled. She had heard that sentence and that tone of voice once before. The same cold chill fell upon her: "It was you!"

They stood and glared at each other. Then she turned and marched straight out, and he gathered up his coat and hat and left with a look so furious that everyone moved out of his way.

Then one day he saw her again. She was driving that roadster just ahead of him. His heart jumped, then settled down to pounding. He followed her without thinking—without knowing why. As they drove, he could see her face reflected in the rear-view mirror of her car—glory of perfect skin, pert nose, sweet lips, wisps of that chestnut hair.

Her eyes were looking at him—Looking at the reflection of his own face in the mirror as it came to her from behind! And so their eyes met and held each other, separated by fifteen feet and each looking into the same tiny glass that held for the moment all the world.

The two cars moved down the street. There was a traffic light on a pole in the middle of the street. The light showed red. A policeman shouted.

Her car went right on and knocked the pole with a great crash. He couldn't stop. He rammed into the back of her car. Then he could only crawl out and go to her where she stood shakily by her ruined roadster.

"I'm sorry—terribly sorry. It was all my fault."

"No, no. I should have seen the light. I was ahead..."

They both stopped and smiled at each other.

"You were staring."

"Yes, so were you."

He held her hand, and they faced the purple policeman so calmly and so much together that he could only gape at them.

Well-Dressed at Little Cost

IT WAS some job, Ladies of The Sewing Circle, to get these three lovelies together to pose for the camera this week.

They're under the strict tutelage of Dame Fashion just now, learning the latest lessons on how to be well turned out this Spring without benefit of a private mint. You can understand, then, why the co-ed above, center, sort of jumped the gun, so to speak, and was already on her way when the camera clicked.

A Frock That Clicks.

Speaking of things clicking, don't think that new princess gown she's wearing isn't doing it in a big way. Can't you see from where you're sitting that it is simple to sew besides being a figure-flatterer of the first order? The buttons half way and a neat little collar in contrast are all its lively lines need to complete the perfect balance—chic vs. simplicity. Take a tip from this stylish student and figure it out for yourself in cashmere or velveteen. The style is 1202 and it can be had in sizes 12-20 (30-38). Size 14 requires 4 3/4 yards of 39 inch material plus 3/4 yard contrasting.

Go Print for Spring.

The charming young lady above, left, has chosen to model a very dainty and rather picturesque little frock for she believes you'll be interested in this style as a fitting gesture to Springtime. Especially in a modern print, featuring, say, pussycats or deep-sea flowers, would this frock be tempting. The skirt is bias-cut for artistic reasons, and the circles of contrast aid and abet its gracefulness. Let yourself go print then, come Spring. Style 1257 is designed in sizes 12-20 (30-40 bust). Size 14 requires 4 1/2 yards of 39 inch material. Eleven yards of bias binding is required for trimming as pictured.

Lest you begin to think every day is Sunday for our starring trio, the trim-looking young lady above, right, wants you to concentrate now on her new gingham gown. Not an ordinary bread-and-butter cotton version, but a beautifully cut, carefully planned dress for general service. The linked button front is enough to give it first place on your Spring sewing list if Sew-Your-Own designers know their clients as well as they think. However, there's more to recommend it: a young becoming collar, a simple yoke-and-sleeve-in-one construction, and a slender action-built skirt. Put them all together they spell CHIC—that little word with a vast meaning. Style 1267 is for sizes 34-48. Size 36 requires 4 yards of 35 inch material plus 1 1/4 yards contrasting.
